There are no present indications of a torm, and Sergt. Dunn thinks he will have few warmer days for us this Fall, although a cannot spare them just now.

The co'd breeze from the north blowing to-ay at twelve miles an hour will keep the eather about as it is to-day until it shifts to ome other quarter, and when it does change is liable to blow almost anything in the eather line.

Sergt. Dunn assured an Evening World reporter that no one need be alarmed at the presence of clouds in our atmosphere today, for he is sure they mean nothing.

MISUSING HIS OFFICE.

Complaint That Imported Weellen Goods Are First Overvalued and Then Delayed, Through Collusion with an Association of Manutacturers-Denials from the Cus-

Importers of woollen goods in this city have a bitter grievance against the Appraiser's Office, and as they may they can get no mits faction here they have appealed to the highest authorities of the Treasury Department at Washington to investigate the matter.

A delegation composed of representatives of several of the largest woollen importing houses here called upon Assistant Secretar of the Treasury Maynard yesterday and laid their case before him.

He promised to give the matter his imme diate attention, and said he would probably diate attention, and said he would probably send a commission to this city to investigate.

One of the members of this delegation, who was found at his office this morning, spoke very emphatically about the matter. Said he:

'We charge that Assistant Appraiser Edgar G. Brown, who has charge of the division of wool and woollen goods, has been making unlawful discrimination against us in the appraisement of our goods, and that this is done with the intention of obstructing the importation of woollen goods into this port.

the importation of woollen goods into this port.

"It is done by making charges of undervaluation against us and ordering the goods into store for reappraisement. They are kept there, under one pretext or another, sometimes as long as five or six weeks, and then in every case the result has been that the valuation of our original invoice has been sustained."

"How does this affect your business?"

"It causes such delay that very frequently our customers have cancelled their orders and thrown the goods back upon our hands, because we could not deliver them as we agreed to, and we have lost thousands of dollars in this way.

"As it is we have to save all we can on the cost of the stuff in order to make a profit at all, even to shipping the goods on steamers. A delay of time to six weeks after they have been thirty days in transit is a very vital matter.

been thirty days in transit is a very vital mat-ter with us, as any one can appreciate, and a house like ours, which has been doing busi-ness here for fifty years, cannot put up with such delays.

'We have appealed in vain to the local authorities and the result is that we have been compelled to go to Washington and make our complaints at headquarters. I think we made an impression on the Treasury Department, and that the wrong will so in be righted."

It was stated that the primary cause of this systematic persecution, which has been going on now they say for the past nine months, is the pernicious activity of one Henjamin Hinds, formerly a United States Special Treasury Agent, but now an employee of the National Wool Manufacturers' Association, at a salary of $10,000.

National Wool Manufacturers' Association, at a salary of $10,000.

His special duty, it is alleged, is to hang around the Appraiser's office, keep himself informed of what is going on, do everything in his power to annoy importers and obstruct the importation of woollen goods.

It is charted that he is "in" with the Assistant Appraiser, and that he is furnished by him with samples of goods, held for reappraisement, and that he sends these to the m mhers of the National Association, who dunlicate the patterns before the imported duplicate the patterns before the imported goods can be placed upon the market.

had sustained the invoice valuation after a reapproisement.

In regard to Hinds, he said that he had nothing to do with the Department and was never permitted to see the goods before the valuation had been placed upon them. He sometimes received information from Hinds in regard to the market value of goods, and had often relied upon his statements in this respect, for he was an expert in all such matters.

On several previous occasions charges of the same kind had been brought against him, but in every instance he had been able to re-fute them.

Collector Magone declined to say anything about the matter, as it was outside of his department.

Dr. Willis G. Alling Wedded to Happy J. Dantels at Bridgeport, Cons.

[SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.] BRIDGEPORT, Coun., Nov. 23,-Dr. Willis G. Alling, of New Haven, was married in this city last Thursday to Miss Happy J. Daniels.

twenty-five years. She was a short time ago in the training-school at the State Hospital, in New Haven, where Dr. Alling made her acquaintance.

Later she accepted a position as nurse in Philadelphia. Her home is Chester, Conn.

The records at the Town Clerk's office, this city, show that Dr. Willis G, Alling, aged forty-nine, of New Haven, was given a marriage liceuse on Saturday, Nov. 10.

The permit was for he marriage to Happy J. Dan els, aged twenty-five. Dr. Alling stated that he had been once married and divorced.

As yet the marriage certificate has not been returned to the Register's office. The ceremony was performed by Rev. B. B. Beardsley, and, it is alleged, according to the laws in this State is not binding, because the reverend gentleman has ceased to continue in the work of the ministry.

After the wedding ceremony the pair, accompanied by Dr. Alling's sister, Mrs. P. B. Tuttle, and Dr. Alling's son, went to New York on a wedding tour. That being over, they all returned to Dr. Alling's residence on Orange street, New Haven.

All this they say is done with a view of injuring the importing business as much as possible.

The report of the doings of the delegation at Washington stirred up no little commotion in the Appraiser's Department this morning. Appraiser McMullen himself said he knew nothing about the charges except what he had read in the papers, but he knew that Assistant Appraiser Brown was a good officer and was worthy of unqualified praise for the manner in which he had administered the affairs of his division.

Said the Appraiser:

"Why, he has been advancing valuations all the time, from 2 per cent. up to 200, and as for keeping goods in store merely for the purpose of annoying importers, it is absurd. I have no doubt that goods are delayed in store, o tentimes but that is something we cannot help, and it is a necessary evil. We cannot appraise goods always the moment they arrive. But you had better talk with Mr. Brown about it."

The Assistant Appraiser made a general denal of all the charges, and said that goods had never been detained longer than was necessary to ascertain their value. This was sometimes very difficult, because the goods having been purchased frequently some four of we months previous, their market value might have changed maternally.

He admitted, however, that very often he had sustained the invoice valuation after a reapproisement.

In regard to Hinds, he said that he had nothing to do with the Department and was appears to the position. The said that he had nothing to do with the Department and was appears to the position of the position of her appointment has not yet been sent her. After its receipt she will be allowed five days in which to qualify by taking the oath of office.

and Friends. Judge Lawrence, of the Supreme Court, in Chambers, yesterday was reluctantly forced in the case of Antonio Messtreago, an Italian boy, to tory by Police Justice Patterson, a few weeks ago, at the instance of the Society for the Prevention of Crueity to Culidren.

The boy's father carried a hand-organ about the streets and the boy collected money from spell-bound auditors. The father was arrested and fined for allowing his young son to engage in a 'wandering occupation," and the boy was committed with the unders anding that he was to be released after his father's trial.

Under the law, which Judge Lawrence said should be promptly amended, if a child is once committed to an institution by a police justice it cannot be released by any court, even if it is alterwards ascertsined that the commitment was based upon misrepresented facts, nor can the action of the magistrate be reviewed.

This is the law which forced Judge Lawrence's action and which also proved mischevious in the case of Josic Shepard, lately carried through by The Evening World.

The Judge declared that the law, in many cases, worked injustice and was destrimental to the interests of the calidren and parents.

Sill, as the law stands, it is iron-bound, and Judge Lawrence said that while it remained so it would be useless to bring such cases into the Supreme Court.

BABY MAUD LOST TO THEM. Judge Bookstaver Refuses to Let the Megas Adopt the Child.

Judge Bookstaver, of the Court of Comm

Pleas, this morning decided the suit insti-tuted by Felicia and Antonio Mega to secure the adoption of a twenty-months-old infant called Maud, which was left with Sister called Maud, which was left with Sister Irans, Sister Superior of the New York Foundling Asylum, in March, 1888.

Judge Bookstaver upheld the position taken by the Sister Superior, refusing to allow the Megas to adopt the child.

The Megas keep a greery store at 236 East One Hundred and Eighth street. They had a child of their own, but it died soon after it was born, and in its place was substituted the baby Maud, of the Foundling Asylum, the understanding being that Mr. and Mrs. Mega were to raise her or $10 a month until abe was able to go without nursing.

Mr. and Mrs. Mess reared the child tenderly and became as much attached to it as if it had been their own. They wanted to adopt it, but when they applied to Sister Irene their request was refused.

Judge Bookstaver holds that the asylum has a right to the custody of the children left in its care until they become of age and that no child can be allowed to be legally adopted by any one until after it is five years old.

Little Maud being under this age, the Judge said that she should remain in the care of Sister Irene until she is at least five years old.
